

GRASSAHOL is a high-energy, five-piece bluegrass band consisting of Carl Yaffey on banjo, Chas Williams, fiddle; Heidi White, bass; Buren Carter, guitar; and Scott Brooks, on mandolin.

Their music is a mix of the old, the new, the occasionally obscure, and a full quiver of original songs that keep folks entertained and tapping their toes. Their songs range from the bluegrass standards to the less traditional newgrass sounds of more recent days, drawing on musical influences in bluegrass, blues, minstrel, folk, and Americana.

The high-energy strains of their bluegrass music and their tight vocal harmonies make Grassahol fun to listen to, even for audiences unfamiliar with bluegrass. Wherever they play, audiences appreciate the emotions in their music and the new way they deliver the sounds of traditional bluegrass.

Grassahol is based in Columbus, Ohio and entertains audiences across Ohio and the Midwest – young and old – in the city or out of town – from the gardens of the Ohio Governor’s Mansion to the main stage at the Millersport Sweet Corn Festival.

Grassahol band members are professionals who have been around music for many years and have a real love of bluegrass as well as a love of sharing it with an audience. They would love for you to hear them play!
